PREDICTIONS PROVE TRUE.

The predictions of those who declared that, with the machinery of the league of nations set up and the government of the United States subordinated to it, history would repeat itself in the effort of the organization to increase its powers and assume the functions of a super-government, have been borne out at the sessions of the league to date. A Geneva dispatch of November 10 states that "the league threatens to grow in influence faster than most people anticipated and desired." The truth of this is illustrated in the declaration of Senator La Fontaine of Belgium, that no country should have exclusive jurisdiction over the raw materials it produces. This declaration evidences a theory that the resources of a nation should be subject to allocation by a super state and a beginning in President Wilson's doctrine of universal free trade, the establishment of economic equality among nations.

The doctrine was quickly challenged in the league assembly by the Canadian delegation which said, "You cannot expect the great country in the south of Canada to become a part of the league if there is any pretension that the league can interfere in its internal affairs." The doctrine merely means that Europe, made up of small nations whose resources are not as rich as those of the United States, would like to get this nation into the league where they can allocate its resources among themselves, through their power to outvote this nation.

Canada and Australia stand in the same position as the United States and should there be persistence in the determination to make the league supreme in world commerce, they will no doubt break away and align themselves with the United States as against any organization, such as the present league of nations, operated for the exploitation of the more favored nations and for the enrichment of the countries of Europe. Canada and Australia, as well as the United States, have the right to the enjoyment of whatever wealth may be created from the conversion of their own natural resources into manufactured products and this mainly protest on the part of the Canadian delegation shows that they do not intend that they shall be despoiled of what is rightfully theirs.

GOLD MINERS PREPARE TO FIGHT.

Everywhere in the west where gold is being or has been produced, the determination to have congress do something that will aid the gold mining cause is daily becoming more apparent. President S. S. Wold of the Tom Reed Gold Mines in Arizona is one of the latest to take a stand on the subject and declare himself. He has recently been quoted on this subject as saying:

"We are asking for nothing but what is fair. We want no subsidy from the government or the people. All we are asking for is a chance to get the gold out of the ground. We know that the jewelry business has been making fabulous profits on gold for the past four years. They buy our gold for $20 per ounce, the same as they did over 100 years ago and sell it for about $200 an ounce when manufactured into various articles. What we are asking for is that they pay a fair price for the metal, not the government or the people but the big gold manufacturers. Is it right that we who produce the gold can hardly pay fair interest on the investment while the big jewelry firms of New York have been paying dividends that they are ashamed to publish?"

This is the argument of the gold miner and his demand is just. It is expressed in simple terms, so simple that at the present session of congress there should be no excuse for the membership to delay action on the McFadden bill for a minute. The McFadden bill would levy an excise tax of $10 an ounce on manufactured gold, and from the proceeds the government would pay the gold miner a premium of $10 per ounce for the gold produced in the operation of his mine and thus greatly stimulate the industry.

CHRISTMAS BUYING.

The oldtime custom of everybody rushing into stores just before Christmas, buying right and left, then clogging the mails and express by mountains of small packages, is contrary to all reason. Thoughtful people keep their eyes open all year for appropriate gifts. Store clerks and mail and express employees dread the holiday season. A period supposed to bring gladness, which is celebrated to make people happy, brings hurried days and nights, overwork and sometimes breakdowns to hundreds of thousands of people. It should be possible to celebrate this holiday without making a lot of people sick.

Many people complain that they can't buy Christmas stuff in advance because they never have money ahead. That reason may be genuine in a number of cases yet often the people who give that excuse are throwing away money in silly purchases throughout the year. It is impossible for the merchants to serve the people efficiently when they all rush into the stores within a short period, and buy as much in a week as they ordinarily would in two months. One reason why so many foolish purchases used to be made at Christmas time was that people could get very little attention in crowded stores and grabbed for whatever they could get.

Goods sent off a few days before Christmas do not usually reach their destination until after the holiday. Not much use to send it unless you can be prompt. Christmas gifts should be bought and sent well marked "Not to be opened until Christmas." Those who do that will have the warm thanks of all in the retail trade and in the postal and express service.

The University of Nevada announces its annual short course for prospectors and has prepared an attractive limited term line of work for those who desire to take advantage of the opportunity presented. This course is one that should increase in popularity, as it gives in practical form the essentials that are invaluable to the man in the hills.

All America should be Americanized thoroughly. And no foreigner should be welcomed who cannot be or will not be Americanized in spirit, even though he may not become a naturalized American.
